

Research Paper Outline

i. Introduction

- a. Hook: if you ever interacted with multiple language speakers, you would notice that there will be sudden change of their personality as they change their language usage.
- b. Background Information: for example, as a bilingual myself, being a talkative extrovert is what I'm when speaking in mandarin, but after transferring to English, I start to think more when I talk, speak in a much slower and calmer way.
- c. Research Problem & Significance: help those who were confused when they started to use a different language, concerned if these changes may affect them permanently, beside the concern of the users to understand, and explain those languages that are tag with stereotypes.
- d. Thesis: this phenomenon will not affect one's personality, the change of emotions and behaviors when change occurs on the usage of language, were cause by the user tagging themselves into different situations that was this language was often related to or used.
- e. Map Out Your Paper: introduce, explain different way how this phenomenon appears, concluded

ii. Body Paragraphs

- a. Main claim 1: using the examples given in both articles to explain future more about this phenomenon
- b. Main claim 2: use the concept that I've learn from both articles to explain my own experience
- c. Main claim 3: use the concept to explain stereotypes in different language user

iii. Conclusion

- a. Restate Thesis: the change in language usage might affect a person's action and thoughts, but it does not change a person's personality, it was only the change in the attitude when using these languages
- b. Summary of Essay: each language has its unique usage and culture, learning them will never be inconvenient nor a waste of time, is the closes way to feel the world of humankind.
- c. Discuss Implications: each type of language contains the culture of a human society, the most convince and cheapest way to truly became inside this culture, is to learn their culture